

"Misinforming the uninformed"

THE CABBAGE

March 27, 2003

www.thecabbage.com

Volume VI, Issue 9

Curtains for Moore at Oscars

Hollywood Republicans terminate leftist speech

HOLLYWOOD—Documentary filmmaker Michael Moore was killed onstage at the Academy Awards on Sunday. The Oscar winner for best documentary went into an anti-Bush rant during his acceptance speech, but was quickly quieted by a small group of Republican movie stars.

Moore won the Oscar for his documentary film, "Bowling for Columbine," a piece of leftist propaganda that, besides slamming gun ownership, somehow tries to place recent U.S. foreign policy on the same moral plane as the 9-11 terrorist attacks.

After accepting the award Moore quickly went into an anti-war/Bush rant. "I have invited my fellow documentary nominees on stage with us...because we like nonfiction. We like nonfiction and we live in fictitious times...we have fictitious election results that elects a fictitious president...sending us to war for fictitious reasons...the fiction (sic) of duct tape...orange alerts...we are against this war, Mr. Bush. Shame on you, Mr. Bush, shame on you. And any time you got the Pope and the Dixie Chicks against you, your time is up," yelled Moore on top of loud booping.

Halfway through the rant, Bruce Willis, Arnold Schwarzenegger, and Clint Eastwood—all prominent Hollywood Republicans—emerged onto the stage with guns drawn. At the end of the speech, they proceeded to open fire, terminating the unsubstantiated rant. "Hasta la vista, Lefty," said a deadpan Schwarzenegger. Eastwood, before firing, inquired of Moore, "Do you feel lucky? Well, do you punk?" Willis then interjected, "Yippee kay aye, Michael Moore!" When the shots ended, NRA president and actor Charlton Heston stood over Moore and demanded, "Take your stinking paws off the stage, you darn dirty ape."

Moore (right-center) is terminated by prominent Republicans Arnold Schwarzenegger (left), Clint Eastwood (left-center), and Bruce Willis (far-right).

Later in the show a stunned Barbara Streisand actually managed to refrain from spewing forth leftist propaganda while presenting an award.

Man Foolishly Compares Miss USA Contestants to Girlfriend

CHICAGO—25-year-old Darren Conrad compared his girlfriend, Julianne Mazzone, to each and every Miss USA contestant Monday night. Conrad regretted his actions at the end of the pageant. "Man, that was stupid," lamented Conrad. "Julie's pretty hot, but look at these girls. Whoa! I never knew a swimsuit could do that! I wish my girlfriend looked that good. Plus, she's nowhere as congenial as these gals."

***www.thecabbage.com***

Copper Rock Coffee

Grand Opening March 31st!!!
Downtown Appleton on College Ave.

Tonic Sol-Fa: "Tonic so-so," says Frosh

MLC—Freshman teacher track student Jim Williams was not that impressed with the Tonic Sol-Fa concert Friday night at MLC. "It was more like tonic so-so," snickered Williams. "I mean, they got really good voices, but I didn't hear any cool guitar solos or anything. They'd be okay if they got some instruments. That and some longer hair, then they'd rock."

Also in this issue:

- Boo beats Brodie, some other guy 3
- Dorm resident no longer keeping frozen pizzas in window 3
- 1/8th of Sweet Sixteen from basketball powerhouse state of Wisconsin 4

Hooters Opens in Afghanistan! Page 3.

Loser Clique Forms NIT Pool

MYRTLE BEACH, SC—A group of unpopular high school students created a gambling pool for the often-ignored National Invitation Tournament (NIT) early last week. The students, somehow overlooked for entry into the school's more popular NCAA tournament pools, decided to form their own pool to set themselves apart from the "cool kids," but still join in the fun of gambling on college age student athletes.

Approximately 40 male students of the Carolina Forest High School junior class were not asked by members of popular cliques to enter their NCAA pools. Instead of abandoning their desires for comradeship, competition, and college championship gambling, the overlooked students decided to form their own pool. Having been left out of the fun one too many times, the group set themselves apart by creating a pool consisting not of the popular teams of the NCAA tournament, but of the likewise rejected mediocre teams of the National Invitation Tournament.

The NCAA tournament is the illustrious college men's basketball championship, played by the nation's top 64 teams. The NIT tournament is played among the leftover teams not invited to the "big dance."

Members of the loser clique were quick to point out the benefits of forming an NIT pool. "I've seen those huge NCAA brackets covering the inside their lockers," said Peter Wilde. "Ours is almost half the size. Plus it took only half the time to make."

When asked why he and others were left out of the more popular NCAA pools, Wilde responded, "Well, it's easy to figure out. I mean, just look at my record with the ladies. I'm O for life. And then there's guys like Tim over there who've had plenty of dates, but the level of competition for those wins wasn't very high."

Besides the relative ease of organization, others pointed out the potential monetary benefits of an NIT pool, "With fewer teams and fewer people, I've got a real chance of winning this year. Plus my inferior knowledge of the topic of collegiate sporting teams is not as large of a handicap, considering the fact that nobody knows anything about these loser teams," said Terrence Smith. "But then again the NIT showcases such big names as Georgetown and UNLV—they used to be major contenders, I've heard."

One loser pointed out the benefits of losing the NIT as opposed to losing the NCAA tournament, "It's not as heart-breaking because the games aren't on TV, unless you're cool and have cable. Plus since it's the losers' pool, not as many girls find out how bad you did."

Approximately 40 losers entered the NIT pool at a cost of 25 cents per person, winner take all.

Calendar Correction

There are no classes on Wednesday, April 16.

Engineer Sets Higher Goal

"100 percent not enough," says local man

NEENAH, WI—37-year-old Kimberly Clark employee Eric Dretske announced to his coworkers shortly before lunch break on Friday that he was going to "start giving it 110 percent." The research and development statistical engineer quickly added, "of course, in order to make my goal mathematically feasible, I'll need to gain precisely 15 pounds." Dretske then proceeded to eat three foot-long subs, a two-pound bag of potato chips, and one pound of butter, along with drinking a six-pack of orange soda. The 150-pound bachelor is hoping to gain his goal of newfound exertion in just two weeks.

(continued on page 6)

Highlights of War Coverage

- Bombing presented in surround sound
- CNN correspondent Nic Robertson played by Bruce Willis
- Al-Jazeera text crawler going backwards
- CBS news coverage interrupted for NCAA updates
- The ladies still love Wolf Blitzer
- Arthur Kent now the "Scud Dud"
- Millions of couch potatoes flee Baghdad as Iraqi TV is knocked off the air
- CNN now CSN, the Casual Swearing Network
- Embedded journalists finding it difficult to portray Islam as a peaceful religion
- War not as glamorous as bad Jerry Bruckheimer movies
- France sits out another war as U.S. helps rid world of danger
- Iraq winning (as reported by Iraqi News Agency)

THIRD ANNUAL PROFFY AWARDS

Self-Proclaimed Arbiter of Literary Excellence Award.....	Prof. Czer
Instructivist-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Pfeifer
Wendland-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Wendland
Dendrologist-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Ash
Perfect Attendance Award.....	Prof. Levorson
Antichrist-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Pope
Dapperly Dressed Award.....	Prof. Rupnow
Best Musical Score.....	Prof. Joyce Schubkegel
Bachelor-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Minch
Bachelorette-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Hopf
Antarctic Explorer-of-the-Year.....	Prof. Buck
Primus Inter Pares Award.....	President Olsen
Secundus Inter Pares Award.....	Vice President Thiesfeldt
Mr. Universe.....	Prof. Deutschlander
Best Animated Short.....	Prof. Hartzell
Rookie-of-the-Year Award.....	Prof. Gosdeck
Lifetime Achievement Award.....	Instructor Scharf

Mr. Trite Conversation Starter of the Week

***Clever ideas to break the ice and make that great first impression***

■■■■■■■■■■
 "Man, I learned (lots/nothing) in my classes today. How 'bout you?"